

Our Contributors

Professor Emily Klenin is retired from UCLA and lives in Pennsylvania, where she is a member of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Lancaster.

David A. Williams is Emeritus Perren Professor of Astronomy at University College London, and a former President of the Royal Astronomical Society.

Charles Stewart is a pharmaceutical physician. He graduated in Chemistry from Queen's University, Belfast and Cambridge University, as a synthetic organic chemist with work that focused on the synthesis of nucleosides, oligoribonucleotides, photochemistry, and analysis of phospholipids. He later qualified in medicine at Dundee University and after hospital based clinical practice and general practice, joined the pharmaceutical industry, to work on many aspects new drug development from inception and design and clinical trials, through to Market Authorisation. This work successfully resulted in the approval of four New Chemical Entities for treatments in dermatology and cancer. He is a Fellow of the Royal Society of Chemistry and Member of the Faculty of Pharmaceutical Physicians. He has now retired and lives in his family home near Downpatrick with his wife, Rosamund. In retirement, he has written a tragic comedy A bottle in the Shed a set in the world of medical sciences at Queen's University, and has developed a heritage orchard of old varieties of Irish apples.

Rev Frank Walker is a retired Unitarian minister who most recently served as minister of Cambridge and Bury St Edmonds from 1976 to 1999.

Catherine Robinson has been a member of the Oxford Unitarian congregation (Manchester College Oxford Chapel Society) since 1992. As a professional editor, formerly employed by Oxford University Press and Oxfam Publishing and now semi-retired, she is a member of the Lindsey Press Panel, editing and producing Unitarian publications on a voluntary basis.

Rev Jim Corrigan is a recently-retired Unitarian minister and member of Golders Green Unitarians in North London. He retired in 2019 after five years as minister to the Lancashire Collaborative Ministry, serving the congregations of Padiham, Rawtenstall and Chorley, and before that was an interim minister in Suffolk for two years. Jim's first career was journalism, and this included 17 years at BBC World Service in London.

Alan Deacon is Emeritus Professor of Social Policy at the University of Leeds. He has been a member of the Methodist Church for over thirty years, and is also a member of the Progressive Christianity Network. In recent months, however, he has become increasingly grateful for the welcome and space for spiritual reflection offered by Mill Hill Chapel in Leeds.