

Our Contributors

Margot Stevenson is a scholar of Religion and the Bible (Harvard University, Ph.D). Her book Journey to Heaven, a spiritual allegory, is forthcoming. She is currently working on a project dealing with female prophets in the Bible and early Christianity. She can be reached at mlstevenson@rocketmail.com.

Barrie Needham was born and bred in England. He is emeritus professor of spatial planning at the Radboud University, Nijmegen, the Netherlands.

Esther R. Suter is an ordained minister in the Swiss Evangelical Church. She worked as a pastor in congregations, was chaplain in a university hospital and a volunteer pastor in a poor area of Manhattan (Hell's Kitchen, 1983). She grew up in Switzerland in a rather rigid family. She first worked as a trilingual secretary in Paris (1968-1970), then studied languages and theology and focused on Ecumenism and Interfaith Dialogue. In 2020 she submitted her doctoral thesis entitled 'The Understanding of Existence by Fritz Buri (1907-1995)'. As a journalist she participated in 1985 in the 3rd UN-World Conference of Women in Nairobi and 1995 in the 4th UN-World Conference of Women in Beijing. Since 2010 she has participated as a delegate of IAW (International Alliance of Women) in the annual session of the UN-Commission on the Status of Women in New York. She is the IARF-Main Representative for Human Rights at UN-Geneva and also at the Council of Europe. She is deputy president of the International Association of Liberal Religious Women (<https://ialrw.org>).

Csaba Tódor is a Unitarian minister in Székelykeresztúr, Romania, and teaches at the Protestant Theological University in Kolozsvár, Romania. He has been writing about identity, inter-cultural theology, contextual theology, liturgy and theology of transition within Transylvanian culture, later comparing Unitarian funerals in England and Transylvania. He is especially interested in theologies behind rituals and structure, and theological systems. He gained his PhD in Manchester, UK, on funeral rituals and death related theologies.

Helena Fyfe Thonemann read Philosophy and Economics at the London School of Economics, in the mid-1960s, under Sir Karl Popper. She is a member of the Church of England, and writes freelance. She lives in Oxfordshire. Her writings include Confessor to the Last of the Habsburgs: Vitus Georg Tonneman, S. J. (2008), Educated Circles and their Mode of Reasoning – Bishop Charles Gore versus T.H. Huxley, (2011), 'Peter Fyfe of Glasgow; (1856-1940)', The Royal Environmental Health Institute of Scotland Journal, (Summer 2012) and 'David Hume's Essay "Of Miracles" Revisited,' Faith and Freedom (2018).

Rev Dr Marcus Braybrooke is a retired Anglican vicar, Joint-President of the World Congress of Faiths and author of many books on religions and spirituality.

Peter B. Godfrey is a retired Unitarian minister and Editor Emeritus of Faith and Freedom.

Andrew M. Hill is a retired Unitarian minister living in York after serving St Mark's Unitarian Church in Edinburgh for 33 years. He has a particular interest in Unitarian history and in Unitarian and Unitarian Universalist affairs generally. As well as writing published articles on various aspects of Unitarian history he has also edited Celebrating Life: a book of special services (1993) and was joint editor of the hymn book Sing Your Faith (2009)